

“Fancy a beer Kev?”

The Dailies Mirror & Mail

Actor Michael Le Vell, AKA Kevin Webster, got a pint thrown in his face while out drinking with his mates. He is lucky the culprit didn't keep the forward momentum going and stick the glass there too.

What 'our Kev' seems oblivious too is the serious and abhorrent crimes he is charged with (19 in all). He also seems to think that his celebrity profile is sufficiently high enough that by vigorously denying the charges he will be believed... Its not & he's not.

What the egotistical fuck-wit fails to understand is this is not the first time that he has been up in court for noncing. Neither was he found to be not guilty at that trial, and not everyone is as silly as he looked with beer dripping down his face.

Anyone with any sense would keep a low profile until after the trial... Wanker.

Similarly, A waxwork of the Street's Ken Barlow AKA Bill Cockroache has now been removed from display at Madame Tussauds after it was attacked.

Quite what the waxworks museum expected by keeping the alleged child rapist's dummy on show is beyond me.

Coronation Street star Michael Le Vell attacked in pub: exclusive pictures

12 May 2013 07:49

Actor, facing 19 child sex offences which he vehemently denies, had a pint of beer thrown in his face

Mich

ael Le Vell having a pint thrown over him

Troubled Corrie star Michael Le Vell was left shaken and furious when he was attacked and branded a “beast” on a night out at the pub.

The actor, facing 19 child sex offences which he vehemently denies, had a pint of beer thrown in his face.

But he quickly told friends at his local to “leave it” and not react. Yesterday his new girlfriend Blanca Fouche, 31, claimed: “It’s an assault. People are singling him out because of who he is.”

The pictures, taken by a fellow drinker, show Le Vell initially looking relaxed with his pals.

But then the snaps show how a mystery shaven-headed man ruins his night, leaving the actor, who has played Kevin Webster since 1983, wiping beer from his face and clothes with his sleeve.

Michael

Le Vell having a pint thrown over him at The Railway Pub near his home

The culprit fled after the unprovoked attack and fellow drinkers said it was only the composure of Le Vell and his friends that stopped a fight breaking out.

A witness said: "Michael was standing chatting to half a dozen of his mates when this tall guy approached him with a half-full pint of beer. It looked like the guy was going to walk past Michael but as he drew level with him he threw his beer over him and called him a 'beast'.

"Michael was visibly shaken. He had beer all over his face and down his front. He quickly began drying himself. His mates couldn't believe it. One wanted to go after the guy. Michael told them to do nothing. He looked embarrassed."

Le Vell, 48, then dashed to the nearby home of Blanca, in Altrincham, Greater Manchester.

Blanca said: "Michael feels comfortable in the pub. All his friends go there, he knows everyone. Why would someone do something like this?"

Micha

el Le Vell having a pint thrown over him at The Railway Pub near his home “It’s like Michael is being targeted because he’s on TV. They are singling him out with all this stuff going on.

“But I know Mike. I’ve got to know him. He’s innocent. He doesn’t deserve this. People can’t get away with things like this – idiots singling him out.”

A close friend of the actor also said: “The incident really shook Michael up. The last few months have been very traumatic and his local pub is the one place where he has always been able to go to and get away from his troubles.

“He’s always felt safe and protected there until now. But Michael is determined not to let this get him down and he won’t be hiding away.”

The attack happened last Saturday at Le Vell’s favourite haunt, The Railway Inn which is near his home in upmarket Hale, Cheshire.

One drinker who was there said: “No one knows who the guy was. He’d probably had a few drinks, saw Kevin Webster across the bar and thought he’d make a name for himself by having a go.”

The Daily Mirror revealed three days ago that Le Vell was dating mum-of-two Blanca, who is Chilean.

In the aftermath of the attack she posted a picture with him on Facebook, writing: “I’m a lucky girl, love like this only comes around once.”

Le Vell’s pal said: “Blanca has been a wonderful support to Michael. Even though it is early days in their relationship she has become the rock upon whom Michael can rely.”

The actor is to face trial at Manchester crown court in September. He vigorously denies the charges, which include rape and are alleged to have happened between 2001 and 2010.

He has vowed to clear his name and plans to fight for a change in the law to ban the identification of alleged sex offenders until proven guilty.

A friend said: "Michael thinks it is wrong that those accused have their names published and dragged through the mud. He believes it would be fairer if those accused get anonymity until they are found to be guilty."

Le Vell spoke out after his co-star Bill Roache was arrested on suspicion of offences from 1967 involving a 15-year-old girl. He denies the allegations.

Check out all the latest News, Sport & Celeb gossip at Mirror.co.uk <http://www.mirror.co.uk/news/uk-news/michael-le-vell-attacked-pub-1883979#ixzz2TFTNHfVI>

Follow us: @DailyMirror on Twitter | DailyMirror on Facebook

Waxwork of Ken Barlow defaced: Model removed from display at Blackpool's Madame Tussauds after being attacked following his arrest

- Waxwork removed due to raft of complaints and 'inappropriate pictures'
- The actor is on bail after being charged with two counts of rape

By DAILY MAIL REPORTER

PUBLISHED: 23:54, 12 May 2013 | UPDATED: 01:42, 13 May 2013

Removed: Corrie's Anne Kirkbride poses with the waxwork model of her 'husband' Ken Barlow in 2011

A waxwork of Coronation Street's Ken Barlow has been removed from display at Madame Tussauds after being attacked.

It used to sit in a mock-up of the Rovers Return pub opposite his on-off wife Deirdre.

But bosses at Tussauds in Blackpool took away their Ken Barlow figure following a number of attacks, 'inappropriate pictures' and complaints from customers about its presence.

Bill Roache, 81, the actor who has played Barlow in the ITV soap since 1960, is on bail after being charged with two counts of raping a 15-year-old girl in 1967.

He has pledged to fight the claims but ITV officials have suspended him from the show until any trial ends.

A spokesman for Tussauds said it was not making moral judgments but had removed the waxwork so it did not get damaged because they cost £150,000 each.

A spokesman said: 'It was a hard decision for us because he is a character at a moment in time and not the real person but the British public doesn't always make that distinction and we couldn't risk any further attacks.'

More...

- Coronation Street king Bill Roache vows to fight rape allegation as TV chiefs rework scripts to write him out of the hit soap
- Helen Flanagan defends her comments on Stuart Hall... claiming she was 'upset' about Bill Roache's arrest

Roache is one of the longest-serving soap actors of all time and lives in Wilmslow, Cheshire.

He was taken into custody earlier this month before being placed on bail and is due to appear at Preston magistrates' court next week.

Bill Roache arriving home earlier this month, after it was announced that he has been arrested on suspicion of an historic allegation of a sexual assault

Te nure: Bill Roach as Ken Barlow (far left) in the long-running soap, alongside Anne Kirkbride (Deirdre) and Johny Briggs (Mike)

Read

more: <http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-2323545/Waxwork-Ken-Barlow-defaced-Model-removed-display-Blackpools-Madame-Tussauds-attacked.html#ixzz2TFY2KG27>

Follow us: @MailOnline on Twitter | DailyMail on Facebook