

I fucking told ya so, don't ya fucking know

The Daily Chimpanzee

Remember towards the end of last year when everyone believed that an honest MP had come along in the form of Tommy 'topple over' Watson?

He did after all put that 'awkward' question to the Cunt Cameron. You know the one? About the paedophile ring running out of dirty, depraved Downing Street.

Well fuck me, a year has nearly come and gone and what news have we heard of the outcome?

Fuck all, would just about cover it.

Why? Because it was just another parliamentary, nonce ponce damage limitation exercise.

Course, I was just as acutely aware last year as I am this year that there is no such thing as a good politician.

Good people are not manoeuvred into place to be elected to parliament.

Fuck me, a good politician would either be assassinated within the first week of winning an election or would bring the establishment crashing down in the same time frame.

There are no good honest MP's who have your well being at heart... None!

So, I did a bit of research back then on Tommy Tumble Bellys and wrote a few articles on the corrupt cunt – which were by and large ignored.

Fuck me! I even had a very public spat with the fat bastard on Twitter... That did get noticed though... Woops.

Especially when Tom the Twat tried to wriggle his way out of a tough situation by tweeting, "I don't know who you are, but I find you rather intimidating"... Which, if you know the story was game set and match to me.

You see, Tommy Twank knew exactly who I was and as a politician is amongst the least likely of people to be intimidated by someone on Twitter.

And, I would hate to say that I told you so, because I would be fucking lying.

It gives me great pleasure actually.

I fucking told you that he was no different from the rest of the bent cunts, – a self serving, egotistical, lazy, corrupt parasite – but you wouldn't listen.

Perhaps now the MSM says that he's a bent cunt – in a much more palatable way of course – you might actually believe it.

And best of all, I know that vote rigging is far from all of Tommy Tits little schemes... Don't I Tommy?

Wally Watson likes to read what I have to say, don't cha know... Despite not knowing who I am.

So make the fucking most of it ya fat cunt, cos the truth will out.

Don't cha just love Sundays?

Tom Watson has been placed at the centre of Labour's vote-rigging row in Falkirk after one of the candidates for the seat directly accused him of trying to fix the selection.

Gregor Poynton, a Blairite communications expert, said Ed Miliband's former campaigns chief had used his power in the party to try to install his union-backed office assistant as the candidate.

Mr Poynton also claimed that Mr Watson had been involved in 'all the shenanigans', including trying to pack the Falkirk party with members of the Unite union to win selection for his assistant, Karie Murphy.

Blairite Gregor Poynton, left, has accused Ed Miliband ally Tom Watson, right, of being key to the vote-rigging scandal in Falkirk, Scotland. Police investigated in May amid claims the party was packed with Unite members

He also alleged that the party leadership 'knew what was going on'.

It is the first time Mr Watson, who stepped down from his frontbench role in the wake of the row, has been publicly accused by another party figure of trying to influence the selection process.

Mr Watson did not respond to messages but has previously denied any wrongdoing or involvement in the alleged 'fix' of the selection process in Falkirk.

The explosive claims come just days before the contest to succeed Eric Joyce, who quit the party after a Commons bar brawl, is reopened in the Scottish seat.

Labour suspended the selection in May after The Mail on Sunday revealed it was investigating allegations of vote-rigging by Unite and had referred the matter to the police.

Mr Poynton claimed Mr Watson had been involved with trying to pack the Falkirk party with Unite members to win selection for his assistant Karie Murphy, left. The row has caused headaches for Ed Miliband, right

Ms Murphy and the local party chairman, Stephen Deans, were also suspended – triggering a knock-on threat of industrial action by Unite at the nearby Grangemouth petrochemical plant, where Mr Deans is a union convener.

Mr Miliband dropped the investigation in September after key witnesses withdrew their testimony. Mr Poynton, the UK political director of communications firm Blue State Digital, made his remarks at a party fundraising dinner last week.

He described an atmosphere of 'serious intimidation' during the selection process – claiming he and fellow candidates had 'all been taken out in one way or another'.

He told how Mr Watson had tried to help Ms Murphy by 'packing' the local party with Unite members, 'getting them put on the membership list... they had a spreadsheet of names and a cheque, and he phoned up party office and said you need to accept this'. He described the reaction of Labour HQ as 'it's a bit dodgy... not sure about this', adding about Mr Watson: 'He was involved in it all behind the scenes... all the shenanigans, pushing things through'.

But Mr Poynton said that when the party leadership uncovered the allegations it tried to broker a deal with Unite for Ms Murphy to quietly stand down: 'The party came to a deal... we're not going to investigate this stuff that's gone on, we know what's all gone on, but you have to pull out of the selection,' adding: 'Their preference was, we know it's all happened but it's better for everyone if you just pull out.'

Shortly before the process was suspended, Mr Poynton was eliminated from contention when an all-female shortlist was imposed.

Mr Poynton, who is married to West Dunbartonshire Labour MP Gemma Doyle, said he still had not ruled out being selected when the process is reopened. The allegations follow the leak of emails last week which appeared to show Unite officials were involved in a bid to undermine Labour's inquiry.

Unite dismissed the suggestion and said neither the law nor party rules had been broken in the selection process.

Last night, a senior party source said: 'We have acted swiftly and decisively throughout the process, and the candidate at the centre of the issue has now withdrawn.'

Mr Poynton did not comment.
