

Laughing in the face of fools

The Daily Mail

In the same on-line edition of the Mail in which major publicity is given to those saying that Michael Turner AKA Coronation Streets Kevin Webster should never have been charged and that he was only charged because of the Savile celebrity witch hunt, the propaganda rag also has three articles given over to what laughingly pass for the afore mentioned celebrity paedophiles.

Course, the fact that Turner was first questioned about the raping of the little girl in 2011, long before Operation Yewtree was even thought of, appears to be unimportant to those now voicing their opinion.

C'mon people. It isn't hard to see the agenda behind the Mails headlines is it?

As for Turner being a celebrity actor? What has he ever acted in apart from Corrie? ... Has he ever even acted in corrie – “Sal, Sal, a luv ya sal”.

Not my idea of a celebrity.

Do I think he is innocent? do I fuck.

I do know that juries are made up of everyday people. I also know what celebrity obsessed knobheads, the vast majority of everyday people are... Wouldn't have taken much persuading to convince them that a little girl was out to ruin 'our Kevs' life, I wouldn't have thought.

Course, the fact that it was a little girl with nothing to gain seems to count for fuck all.

Moreover, the CPS very rarely go to court on a wing and a prayer.

And, as my good friend Sue quite rightly pointed out, his reactions were more akin to those of someone who had just had a right stroke of luck rather than someone who had justly been found not guilty of one of the most heinous crimes a person could possibly be charged with... You can read that article by clicking HERE

So, who are the three knob-ed celebs who no doubt think that they are victims of this 'celebrity' witch hunt?

Well, the first is Ex Radio 1 DJ Chris Denning who has been re-arrested on further charges of paedophilia.

And, although the arrest was made by defectives from Operation Yewtree, the charges fall under the category of 'Others'.

You couldn't make this shit up, don't cha know.

Two Radio 1 DJ's from the 60's and 70's coming into daily contact, who are/were both predatory paedophiles yet Dennings crimes are in no way connected to Saviles... Fair enough.

When Radio 1 & 2 was first launched, the new DJ's all posed for a photo outside Broadcasting house. In 1997, that photo was recreated.

Now, despite Denning having a long list of convictions for child sex offences dating back to 1974, the other DJ's all seemed perfectly happy to pose with the Nonce cunt.

Mind you, a quick check on Dennings Wikipedia page and all the usual suspects are mentioned. In fact, one of the sources of information came from a 2012 Independent Newspaper interview with the Vile nonce Jonathan King.

The brown nosing reporters sycophancy towards the warped cunt is quite sickening... Then again, the fucking shit rag gives print time to Derek Laud, so I shouldn't be surprised really.

In the interview, King says that he slept with John Lennon. I am a big fan of Lennon and McCartney but I have to tell ya that I am hearing some naughty things about them.

Add that to the fact that their poof manager attended the child sex parties thrown by ex RADIO 1 DEEJAY, Alan Freeman and there could well be some truth in the rumours.

King apparently also has a photo of himself standing shoulder to shoulder with Margaret Thatcher on display at his home... You do remember Slaggy Maggie don't you?

She's the idol of all our present Government... I wonder why that is?

You can find that Jonathan King interview HERE

The second article is about a Premier League football coach.

West Bromwich Albion's, Mark O'shea is accused of abusing young boys in the shower.

Hmmm. Rather reminiscent of the former Arsenal coach & Chelsea assistant manager, Graham Rix who got a year in prison for having sex with an under-age girl back in 1999.

However, the case is nothing like that of the current Sheffield Wednesday manager Dave Jones.

Jones' case is more in keeping with 'our Kevs'.

Yes, Jones got a not guilty too despite being charged with 21 counts of indecent assault and child cruelty against young boys whilst he was a care worker in a care home.

Had he still just been a care worker when he was charged instead of being the Manager of Southampton Football Club, things may well have turned out different.

The following is from Wikipedia:

The case reached Liverpool Crown Court in December 2000, by which time Jones had parted company with Southampton.

He stood trial on an eventual 21 charges, which was swiftly reduced to 14 after two other alleged victims pulled out of proceedings on the eve of the trial.

After a further alleged victim declined to appear or refused to give evidence, the Judge directed the jury during the fourth day of proceedings to return a formal not guilty verdict on four charges relating to the absent party.

After decreeing a retrial would not be "just" on the remaining charges, the Judge recorded not guilty verdicts on the remaining 10 charges. Jones left cleared of all allegations and was told by the Judge: "No wrongdoing whatsoever on your part has been established"

Another lucky fucker then.

Incidentally, I see the queer rapist MP, Nigel Evans has finally had the decency to quit... Although not entirely:

Evans has now resigned from his Speaker duties, but last night said he would 'robustly' fight to prove his innocence from the back benches.

Quite why it has taken the cunt so long to do what he should have done in the first place is beyond me... Its not really.

He didn't quit earlier because he is like all the other nonce ponce MP's who believe that they have the divine right to do just what the fuck they please.

The following is also from the Daily Mail:

Commons Deputy Speaker Nigel Evans was last night charged with a string of sex attacks on seven young men.

The 55-year-old Tory MP was told he will stand trial accused of eight offences, the most serious of which carries a maximum life penalty.

The decision to charge the openly-gay politician – a popular figure in Westminster – came after he was arrested for a third time yesterday morning. Read More

The third and final article is about ex BBC presenter Michael Souter... Who? ... Exactly.

According to the Mail:

Ex-BBC Norfolk broadcaster Michael Souter, 60, denies 19 sex offences, including indecent assault, indecency with a child and serious sexual offences, against seven boys aged between 11 and 16.

Apparently, Souter has links with Norwich City Football Club... Bit of a pattern opening up here isn't there?

Especially when you add Owen Oyston, Stuart Hall's ex partner and former Blackpool Football Club Chairman into the mix.

Now then Kevin Webster's family, tell us again about this Celebrity Witch hunt?

Fuck me, I'm more famous than these cunts.

Allegation: Chris Denning was re-arrested today under Operation Yewtree
Former Radio 1 DJ Chris Denning has been arrested for a second time after further allegations were made of sexual offences.

The 72-year-old was re-arrested at an address in east London today and has been re-bailed until October.

Denning was originally arrested on June 3 under Operation Yewtree, set up in the wake of the Jimmy Savile scandal.

He was the 13th person to be arrested as part of the police investigation, although the claims against him are not linked to Savile.

Operation Yewtree is being run in three strands: allegations involving Savile, those involving Savile and others, and those involving others.

The claims against Denning are being dealt with under 'others'.

Although Denning has never been formally identified by police, it emerged in June that the man arrested by police was him and he was being investigated for historic offences.

Denning was one of Radio 1's launch team in 1967, having been an announcer on BBC2. He also worked as a music producer.

He famously posed for a picture with a host of famous DJs for the launch of Radio 1 and Radio 2 in 1967.

Among those alongside him were Tony Blackburn, Jimmy Young, Kenny Everett, Terry Wogan, Pete Murray, Ed Stewart and John Peel.

Premier League 'football

Accused: Mark O'Shea outside Wolverhampton Crown Court today after he allegedly watched two young players shower and then sexually abused them after a training session

A Premier League football coach sexually abused youth players in the club's changing rooms after training sessions, a court heard today.

Mark O'Shea, 35, is accused of grooming two boys while working as a youth academy boss for West Bromwich Albion FC.

A court heard the coach would watch the youngsters bathe after training and touched two players sexually while they were drying themselves.

On one occasion he even used a towel to blindfold one junior player and then picked up another naked after coming out of the showers, jurors were told.

Prosecutor Howard Searle said the boys had been reluctant to come forward about the abuse because they were worried about being released by the Premier League club.

Opening the case at Wolverhampton Crown Court on Monday Mr Searle said: 'He groomed two boys he coached and there was sexual touching when they came out of the shower.

'He exploited the situation for his own sexual desires.'

Giving evidence today one alleged victim – who cannot be named – told the jury O'Shea would use a towel to cover his eyes before picking him up while he was naked.

The jury of five men and seven women were played a DVD of the boy's police interview from April 2012 where he explained that the sexual touching had happened 'several times.'

He said: 'When we are having showers, I came out and there's a heater and I'm going to dry myself and he comes to help me.

'Sometimes when I've finished and coming out, he puts the towel around me like a blindfold and picks me up when I'm not dressed.

'Sometimes he is trying to get me to stay longer and dry myself longer. It's annoying.

'Sometimes I say I will have a shower at home but he will say have a shower so you don't sweat in the car.'

'Sometimes when you're having a shower he comes in to the shower and looks.'

The court heard the boys had been reluctant to come forward about the abuse because they were worried about being released by the Premier League club

Pictured in April last year the prosecution claim that as coach O'Shea 'exploited the situation for his own sexual desires'

Giving evidence from a separate interview room at the court the boy said O'Shea would ask him if he wanted to 'play blindfold.'

He added: 'When I used to come out the showers he used to be behind me – he used to pick me up and play blindfold.'

'He used to be at the back of me when I was drying myself.'

'I thought he didn't know what he was doing and then he kept doing it so I told my mum.'

'I told her not to say anything because I was worried I might get released [from the club].'

The court also heard from a teenager, who is also a footballer at the West Bromwich Albion academy, and said O'Shea encouraged him to shower naked.

Giving evidence this afternoon, the witness, who did not himself claim to be abused by O'Shea, said: 'Sometimes he's sitting, waiting for us to finish [in the showers].

'He says sometimes when you're showering you can shower naked if you want to.

'At one point I just had a shower and I was drying myself and because I've got abs we went over to the mirror and we was counting them.

'His hands were on my shoulder and that made me feel uncomfortable.'

But earlier in the day, Samantha Forsyth, defending O'Shea, denied that he had ever had any physical contact with the young players.

Addressing one of the two alleged victims, she said: 'The only time Mr O'Shea would come into the changing rooms would be to tell you and the others to hurry up.

'There would be no physical contact whatsoever between you or Mr O'Shea. He would not touch you in any way.

'He would not play any game like the blindfold game.'

O'Shea, from Sutton Coldfield, Birmingham, will take to the stand later this week.

He worked for the club for five years and denies six charges of sexual assault on a child under 13 years of age.

The trial, which is expected to last for five days, continues.

Souter of Loddon, Norfolk, had also been involved in the scout movement, the prosecution say. A former BBC radio presenter had a 'deviant sexual obsession' with young boys and used his celebrity to abuse society's most vulnerable, a court has heard.

Ex-BBC Norfolk broadcaster Michael Souter, 60, denies 19 sex offences, including indecent assault, indecency with a child and serious sexual offences, against seven boys aged between 11 and 16.

The allegations date to between 1979 and 1999.

Opening the case at Norwich Crown Court, prosecutor Andrew Shaw said Souter, of Loddon, Norfolk, had also been involved in the scout movement and volunteered as youth mentor for the county's social services department.

Mr Shaw added: 'He worked in radio and television and was something of a local celebrity.'

'The significance of his work and his involvement with the scouts and social services, is that these three roles brought

Mr Souter into regular contact with pliable young boys and very often pliable young boys who were among society's most vulnerable.

'We say Mr Souter is a deviant sexual abuser of young boys, particularly boys in uniform and those wearing shorts.'

Mr Shaw said Souter had been spoken to by police in 1990 when another boy went to police accusing him of abuse.

One of the alleged victims in this case told that inquiry that he had not been abused and it was not until 2011 that he felt able to tell officers what had happened, the court heard.

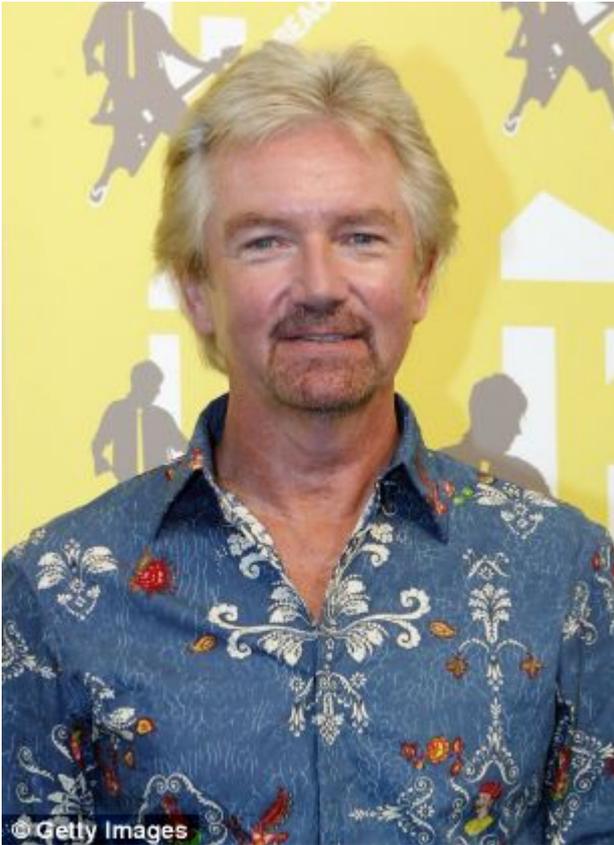

Ex-BBC presenter Michael Souter arriving at Norwich Crown Court, where he is charged with sexual offences

Mr Shaw said mistakes may have been made by the authorities in the past, but added: 'As we have seen in recent high profile cases, victims often only tell what has happened to them when they are ready to.'

The court heard that on one occasion Souter had plied an alleged victim, who had a casual job at BBC Norfolk, with alcohol.

The prosecution say Souter used his position to introduce one of his victims to Noel Edmonds and took boys on trips to restaurants. The boy passed out and woke to find his trousers pulled down and Souter, who had not been drinking, molesting him, jurors were told.

Another victim was indecently touched by Souter while at a scout camp, Mr Shaw said.

He took boys on trips to burger restaurants and theme parks and used his links with Norwich City Football Club to invite them to watch matches at Carrow Road, the court heard.

Mr Shaw said: 'As an indication of how he used his position, on one trip to Carrow Road the defendant was able to introduce one of his victims to Noel Edmonds.'

After one of these matches it is alleged Souter invited one of the boys for a drive in his camper van before asking him to 'tickle' him.

'This was a case of gently introducing a very young child to sexual activity – he was grooming him, preparing him for what was to come,’ the prosecutor said.

The abuse against this boy is alleged to have continued for five years.

Souter presented a number of shows for BBC Radio Norfolk from its launch in 1980 until the 1990s.

Originally from Scotland, he worked as a producer and presenter in both commercial and BBC radio since the mid-1970s.

He had previously presented for Radio Clyde.

So uter used his links with Norwich City Football Club to invite them to watch matches at Carrow Road, the court heard Since 1989 he has worked as a freelance broadcaster and had run a media relations consultancy.

One of the alleged victims became so desperate to stop the abuse that he stole a bottle of bromide – a sedative which can suppress sexual feelings – from his school with the intention of lacing Souter’s tea with it, the court heard.

He hid it under his pillow but when he returned it had been removed, possibly by the defendant, jurors were told.

Souter, who has a second home in Spain, is also said to have abused some of his alleged victims on trips abroad.

Mr Shaw added: 'We cannot try him for offences which did not happen in this country but you, the jury, are entitled to hear about them.'
