

Satanic Bikinis

The Daily Mail

How novel!

A black halter-neck bikini, with strings that form an upside-down pentagram on the wearer's chest, thus leaving the wearer with "serious Satanic tan line".

Apparently they are aimed at the 'Goth' wear market.

I have a feeling that isn't the only market the manufacturer is aiming at.

The devil wears. . . a bikini? Black pentagram two-piece is ideal for 'the goth girl who wants satanic tan lines'

By MARGOT PEPPERS

PUBLISHED: 23:15, 23 May 2013 | UPDATED: 23:15, 23 May 2013

A black halter-neck bikini, with strings that form an upside-down pentagram on the wearer's chest, has been advertised as ideal for 'the goth girl who wants some serious satanic tan lines'.

The two-piece, which is sold on Etsy for $55, is part of MASSblack's ritual collection, which also includes a pentagram one-piece swimsuit, a black lace bodysuit and inverted cross earrings.

Because of the swimsuit's structure, the beach-goer who wears it in the sun will be branded on their chest with the five-pointed shape, which is the official symbol of the Church of Satan.

Since when do goths like sunshine? A black bikini that features an upside down pentagon, a symbol of evil, is being marketed for 'the slightly Satanic, and the fire-and-brimstone fashionista'

The pentagram, which is a five-pointed star turned upside-down, is known as a symbol of evil since the shape symbolically overturns the proper order of things.

If the MASSblack website is anything to go by, though, devil-worshiping emblems like the pentagram and the inverted cross have become something of a fashionable trend of late.

More...

- An offal idea? Scottish student with her sights on Lady Gaga creates handbag collection using cow's STOMACH lining
- Abercrombie & Fitch finally admits it 'sincerely regrets' offending customers with 'thin and beautiful' shopping policy
- 'My castle for a DJ': Kat Von D to sell her Gothic mansion for \$2.5 million as she shops for new home with fiance DeadMau5

A description on the website says the company is 'for all of your satanic clothing and jewelry needs.'

'Pentagrams, cross jewelry, religious relics, home, and apartment decor, get your own antique rosary. Virginal blood is no longer necessary to TRULY Satanify your abode!' it reads.

The company also has a Facebook page which launched earlier this month. On it, they describe their ideal consumer as 'the slightly Satanic, and the fire-and-brimstone fashionista.'

Since when do goths like sunshine? A black bikini that features an upside down pentagon, a symbol of evil, is being marketed for 'the slightly Satanic, and the fire-and-brimstone fashionista'

Metal appreciation website Metal Insider featured the swimsuit in a recent post titled: 'Summer's around the corner, pick up a pentagram bikini.'

The post, which seems to view the bikini in a positive light, reads: 'These are perfect for burning a pentagram in your chest, because face it, what's hotter than that?'

Still, the writer did address one elephant in the room: 'If there's one slight complaint, it's that metal and goth girls usually hate the sun,' he noted.

Read more:

Read

more: <http://www.dailymail.co.uk/femail/article-2329871/The-devil-wears-bikini-Black-pentagram-piece-ideal-Goth-girl-wants-satanic-tan-lines.html#ixzz2UBJCJGtu>

Follow us: @MailOnline on Twitter | DailyMail on Facebook