

The Adams Family

The Daily Chimp

The Daily Chimp does like to pose some challenging questions, that's for sure.

Mind you to my way of thinking, if the Chimpanzee's were real journalist they would be answering questions at this stage, not fucking asking them... But perhaps that's just me.

The question arose following Liam Adams, brother of Sinn Fein President, Gerry Adams, being convicted of raping his own daughter over a six year period starting in 1977 through to 1983.

The dirty, sick, sub-human cunt first raped his daughter Aine, when she was just 4 years old.

The catalogue of abuse that the politicians niece endured beggars belief:

The first time she recalled being raped was while her mother was in hospital giving birth to her younger brother Conor in 1977.

In another incident she was raped by her father at a flat on Belfast's Antrim Road while her brother was asleep in the bed beside her.

Adams, who was a heavy drinker, also forced his daughter to perform sex acts.

According to the Chimp, Liam Adams – like his brother Gerry – was in the propaganda rags own words; a one-time IRA commander.

Strange how they are no longer IRA Terrorists don't cha think?

Gerry, apparently first confronted his brother about the child abuse in 1987, but Liam denied it... Like they do.

Gerry then says that in 2000, Liam admitted to him that he had in fact been abusing his daughter... but did nothing about it.

When the truth finally became public knowledge in 2009 Gerry Adams revealed that his father, also called Gerry and also an IRA Terrorist Commander, had also abused some of his children.

When question by police about why he had done nothing about his brothers confession in 2000, Gerry refused to answer, but later angrily told the press that the police had known about the abuse for over 20 years and did nothing... Sound familiar?

Course, if Gerry knew that the police knew about Liam raping his daughter twenty years ago, it kinda figures that Gerry also knew 20 years ago... Just saying.

And that my friends, is how the Daily Chimp came to pose that difficult question.

"What is the question Spiv, for fucks sake"?

The question is Voice of Reason: Why didn't Gerry Adams tell the police about his brothers confession back in 2000?

"Do you know the answer Spiv"?

Course I do.

Gerry Adams is a politician and all politicians are either paedophiles or paedophile protectors.

Its the glue that holds them all together and prevents anyone speaking out, don't cha know.

And whatever ya do, don't let anyone ever tell you any different.

Gerry Adams' brother found GUILTY of raping and sexually abusing his own daughter over six years from the age of four

- Former IRA commander Liam Adams found guilty of abusing his child Aine
- Carried out rape and sexual assaults when she was aged between 4 and 9
- Aine had waived her right to anonymity to pursue case against father
- 'I can now begin my life at 40 and lay to rest the memory of the five-year-old girl who was abused,' she said

By MARTIN ROBINSON

PUBLISHED: 09:50, 2 October 2013 | UPDATED: 12:41, 2 October 2013

The younger brother of Sinn Fein president Gerry Adams has been found guilty of raping and sexually assaulting his daughter from the age of four.

Liam Adams, 58, a one-time IRA commander, has been convicted of attacking his child Aine, who waived her right to anonymity to help bring him to justice.

The 40-year-old was attacked over a six-year period between 1977 and 1983 when she was aged between four and nine.

After the verdicts she said: 'I can now begin my life at 40 and lay to rest the memory of the five-year-old girl who was abused'.

On trial: Liam Adams, 58, arrives at Belfast Crown Court, where he was found guilty of sexually abusing his daughter Aine, who was hugged after the verdict yesterday

Bespectacled Adams, who was wearing a grey suit, cream shirt and blue tie, showed no emotion as the guilty verdicts were returned at Belfast Crown Court yesterday.

More...

- Peru Two return to court as Irish priest who visited them says they are in 'great form' after finding them living outside of a cell and drinking coffee under a parasol

- Mother accused of starving her four-year-old son to death was too drunk to appear in court to hear evidence, jurors told

Family: Sinn Féin President Gerry Adams had confronted his brother about abuse in 1987 and threatened to hit him with a hammer

Adams, who walks with the aid of a stick and used a court hearing aid to follow proceedings, stood between two prison officers in the dock with his hands clasped tightly.

Aine Adams, who was surrounded by family members, wept and clutched her younger sister Sinead for support.

On the other side of the public gallery, Adams's second wife Bronagh and their daughter Claire, who gave evidence in his defence, also cried. Adams nodded to them as he was led to the cells.

During the trial Aine Adams gave graphic details of the abuse, which started when she was aged four.

The first time she recalled being raped was while her mother was in hospital giving birth to her younger brother Conor in 1977.

In another incident she was raped by her father at a flat on Belfast's Antrim Road while her brother was asleep in the bed beside her.

Adams, who was a heavy drinker, also forced his daughter to perform sex acts.

In a statement read out by a police officer outside the court, Ms Adams said she could finally begin to move on after a long and hard road to achieve justice.

'I do not see this verdict as a victory or a celebration as it has taken its toll and has caused hurt, heartache and anguish for all those involved,' she said.

Hurt: Victim Aine Adams said after the guilty verdicts she was ready to get on with her life

Leaving court: Aine Adams (third right), daughter of Liam Adams, is supported by family and friends after the trial ended yesterday

The allegations were first made public when Ms Adams took part in a television documentary in 2009.

Revelations: Gerry Adams niece Aine allowed herself to be named for a 2009 documentary (pictured) where she accused her father of years of abuse. A short time later, Gerry Adams revealed his father Gerry Snr, a veteran IRA man, had physically and sexually abused members of his family.

Within days of the sex abuse scandal hitting the headlines, Liam Adams fled to the Republic claiming he could not receive a fair trial in Northern Ireland. He handed himself in to police in Co Sligo but could not be detained because the Garda officers did not have the correct documentation.

He was eventually handed over to the Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNI) at the border in November 2011 after losing a lengthy and expensive extradition battle.

The trial opened in April this year but collapsed due to legal reasons and the jury was discharged.

At that time, Sinn Fein president Gerry Adams was called as a prosecution witness. He told the court he confronted his brother about the allegations during a meeting in Buncrana, Co Donegal, in 1987 and Liam Adams had denied the abuse.

He then revealed his brother later confessed while they were out walking together in the rain in Dundalk, Co Louth, in 2000.

Gerry Adams was not called as a prosecution witness for the latest trial, which re-opened before a new jury panel last month.

Ma
nhunt: Liam Adams, right, had gone on the run following the allegations, pictured here in Dublin heading for an extradition hearing

In her statement given outside Laganside court complex, Ms Adams thanked the media for helping her to tell her story.

She said: 'I would like to give all my family a special thanks. Without their love, support and understanding I would not be here today.'

She also expressed gratitude to the PSNI's public protection unit and the Public Prosecution Service.

'I would now ask for some privacy for my family to reflect on recent trying times,' she said.

Adams is due to be sentenced next month.

In a statement issued tonight Gerry Adams described the trial of his brother as tough.

The Sinn Fein president said: 'This has been a difficult and distressing ordeal for all my family and for my niece Aine.

'I would ask the media to respect our right to space and privacy.

'I thank the many people who have sent messages of support and solidarity.'

TIMELINE: AINE ADAMS' BATTLE TO HAVE HER ABUSER FATHER CONVICTED

Battle: Liam Adams' daughter Aine Adams, who has fought for decades to have her father put on trial 1977 – Aine Adams, aged four, is indecently assaulted by her father Liam Adams at her home in Westrock Drive, west Belfast.

May 1978 – Aine Adams recalls being raped for the first time while her mother is in hospital giving birth to her younger brother, Conor.

December 1981 – Liam Adams splits from first wife Sarah.

June 1983 – Gerry Adams elected as West Belfast MP and becomes president of Sinn Fein.

December 1986 – Aine Adams, aged 13, reveals in a letter to her mother that she was repeatedly raped by her father Liam Adams from the age of four.

January 1987 – Aine Adams and her mother report catalogue of child sex abuse to detectives at Grosvenor Road RUC (Royal Ulster Constabulary) station.

February 1987 – Aine Adams and her mother retract statements about abuse over attempts to exploit them for intelligence gathering. A detective tells Aine Adams the file will be retained on record.

March 1987 – Gerry Adams confronts his brother Liam at a house in Buncrana, Co Donegal, and threatens to hit him with a hammer. Gerry Adams is driven to Donegal by his cousin, Kevin Hannaway. Aine Adams and her mother are also present.

1991 – Aine Adams moves to Scotland.

1997 – Gerry Adams is pictured smiling with his brother during an election canvass in Dundalk, Co Louth. Liam Adams is later expelled from Sinn Fein after his brother Gerry learns of his intention to stand as an election candidate for Co Louth. He continues to carry out work for the party.

© Photopress Belfast

other: Gerry Adams is driven from Belfast Crown Court in April 2013 after spending the day giving evidence in the first trial of Liam, which collapsed. He was not called to appear at the latest one December 1999 – While Christmas shopping, Aine Adams tells her younger sister Sinead she was sexually abused as a child.

December 2002 – Liam Adams confesses abuse against Aine when confronted by Sinead, during a meeting in Twinbrook.

January 2006 – Aine Adams returns to Belfast and goes to PSNI to have case re-opened against her father.

November 2007 – Liam Adams is arrested by the PSNI and questioned about child sex abuse allegations. He denies all allegations.

November 2008 – Liam Adams fails to turn up at court in Northern Ireland to face child abuse charges. He fled to the Republic over fears he would not receive a fair trial.

December 2009 – Aine Adams waives her right to anonymity and goes public about the abuse in a television documentary. Gerry Adams urges Liam to hand himself in.

March 2010 – Liam Adams is arrested at a Dublin police station, under a European arrest warrant which was issued by the Serious Organised Crime Agency.

October 2011 – Liam Adams loses fight against extradition

April 2013 – First trial against Liam Adams opens at Belfast Crown Court. Jury of six men and six women is sworn in.

April 22, 2013 – Gerry Adams takes the stand as a prosecution witness and denies claims he did not tell the authorities about his brother sooner because he was trying to save his political skin.

April 25, 2013 – Trial collapses because of legal issues and jury is discharged. Judge Corrine Philpott orders that a new trial be held in the autumn.

October 1, 2013 – Jury of nine men and three women take about four hours to return guilty verdicts in all 10 charges with a majority of 11 to one. Liam Adams is remanded in custody.

Share or comment on this article

Read

more: <http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-2441298/Liam-Adams-brother-Sinn-Fein-president-Gerry-Adams-guilty-raping-daughter.html#ixzz2gcFMiCI1>

Follow us: @MailOnline on Twitter | DailyMail on Facebook

Why didn't Gerry Adams tell police about paedophile brother's confession? President of Sinn Fein refuses to explain why he kept sex abuse of niece a secret

- Liam Adams, 58, convicted yesterday of attacking his child over six years
- Gerry Adams has refused to explain why he did not tell police about abuse
- First trial, which collapsed, heard Mr Adams confronted his brother in 1987

- Mr Adams also revealed his brother later confessed to him in 2000
- Allegations first made public when she took part in documentary in 2009

By JAMES RUSH

PUBLISHED: 16:59, 2 October 2013 | UPDATED: 17:35, 2 October 2013

Sinn Féin president Gerry Adams was today called on to explain in more detail his knowledge of his niece's abuse

Sinn Féin president Gerry Adams has refused to explain why he did not tell police about his brother's sex abuse of his niece for nine years.

The republican leader claimed there was a lot of 'disinformation' as his younger brother Liam Adams awaited sentencing on November 5, in Belfast, for six years of rape attacks on his daughter Aine.

Liam Adams, 58, a one-time IRA commander, was yesterday convicted of attacking his child, who waived her right to anonymity to help bring him to justice.

The 40-year-old was attacked over a six-year period between 1977 and 1983 when she was aged between four and nine.

Gerry Adams pointed the finger at others when he was asked about when he first became aware of the assaults and why he did not report them in 1987.

He said: 'The police were aware over 20 years ago and there is a lot of disinformation being flung about in this issue.

'But let me say this, this has been and continues to be a huge ordeal for my family – we're a very large family – especially for Aine, but for all members of my family. And I think people need to be given the space to come to terms with all of that.

'And if it was your family, you would want the same respect and space and privacy on these matters.'

During the trial Aine Adams gave graphic details of the abuse, which started when she was aged four.

The first rape she remembers took place while her mother was in hospital giving birth to her younger brother Conor in 1977.

The allegations about Liam Adams were first made public when his daughter took part in a television documentary in 2009.

Mr Adams has refused to explain why he did not tell police about his brother's sex abuse of his niece for nine years

On trial: Liam Adams, 58, arrives at Belfast Crown Court, where he was found guilty of sexually abusing his daughter Aine, who was hugged after the verdict yesterday

A short time later, Gerry Adams revealed his father Gerry Snr, a veteran IRA man, had physically and sexually abused members of his family.

He was a witness in the first trial which collapsed earlier this year. He told Belfast Crown Court he confronted his brother when they met in Buncrana, Co Donegal, in 1987 and that Liam Adams had denied the abuse.

More...

- Gerry Adams' brother found GUILTY of raping and sexually abusing his own daughter over six years from the age of four
- Don't they look well? Peru Two drug smugglers return to court as Irish priest who visited them says they are in 'great form' after finding them living OUTSIDE of a cell and drinking coffee under a parasol

He then revealed his brother later confessed while they were out walking together in the rain in Dundalk, Co Louth, in 2000.

Gerry Adams was not called as a prosecution witness for the latest trial, which re-opened before a new jury panel last month.

rt: Victim Aine Adams said after the guilty verdicts she was ready to get on with her life

Called on to explain in more detail his knowledge of his niece's abuse today and whether he has a relationship with her, Mr Adams refused to discuss the case further.

'I'm not going to talk about any of these matters beyond what I have said. It has been a very difficult ordeal for everybody in the family,' he said.

Mr Adams was asked to explain why he did not warn authorities in Co Louth in 2003 that allegations had been made about his brother, who was working with children in Dundalk at the time.

Revelations: Gerry Adams niece Aine allowed herself to be named for a 2009 documentary (pictured) where she accused her father of years of abuse Mr Adams went on to be elected for the Irish parliament for the area in 2011.

'I have answered all of those questions in some detail, in a number of very extensive interviews. The trial is only over yesterday. I have said what I need to say on all of that and we just need a bit of space to come to terms with that,' he said.

The Sinn Fein leader also rejected local media headlines which questioned whether he was fit for public office.

'Thankfully that isn't in the hands of the Belfast Telegraph. That's in the hands of citizens,' he said.

'I'm very proud and privileged to represent the people of Louth and to represent Sinn Fein. I don't take that for granted. It's a huge honour to represent Sinn Fein. It's a huge honour to have the support of your peers.

'All of these issues were rehearsed before the election and during the election campaign. So that's where I get my mandate from – not from the Telegraph in Belfast.'

When pressed for a second time about going to the police at an early opportunity, this time in 2000 after his brother confessed, Mr Adams refused to address the issue.

'Again I have answered that question in detail. You seem to be, with respect, just ignoring what I'm saying,' he said.

'Bear with me, bear with me, let me finish the point I'm making. The point I'm making is that this is a traumatic ordeal for Aine, but for all of my family and we do need the space to deal with all of these matters and that's what I respectfully ask you to do.'

Leaving court: Aine Adams (third right), daughter of Liam Adams, is supported by family and friends after the trial ended yesterday

Mr Adams was forced to answer the questions as he joined party colleagues at the front of the Dail parliament in Dublin to promote referendums taking place at the end of this week.

Irish Taoiseach Enda Kenny said he would not comment on the Adams case but said everyone with information on abuse should know their responsibilities.

'I don't want to comment on the personal circumstances that apply in any family,' Mr Kenny said.

'I have read the reports more than anybody else about this.

'Clearly, the issue of paedophilia is something that is of such sensitivity and importance that where information about this is known, it should be made known to the authorities, of course.'

Read

more: <http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-2441938/Gerry-Adams-refuses-explain-kept-sex-abuse-niece-secret.html#ixzz2gcFnKlpK>

Follow us: @MailOnline on Twitter | DailyMail on Facebook