

Two more 'Corrie' stars under investigation for noncing

The Daily Mail

Since writing about the stars of Coronation Street in my article 'Celebrity Paedophiles in October last year no less than 5 past and present cast members have been investigated for noncing.

FIVE! Since last October... Fuck me, ITV must be as bad as the BBC.

So who are the five past and present members in question?

Well, there is obviously Michael Turner, Aka Michael Le Vell, AKA Kevin Webster.

And as we know, he has been cleared of raping a 6 yr old little girl.

My stance remains the same on the little arsewipe. I believe him to be as guilty as fuck.

I will remind you that ex Corrie actor Peter Adamson, AKA Len Fairclough was also found not guilty in a court of law on the charge of sexually assaulting two 8 year old girls in a swimming pool... Turns out he was guilty as charged.

Then we have Bill Roache, AKA Ken Barlow, who is charged with raping a 15 year old girl along with five charges of indecent assaults against four others aged between 11 or 12 and 16.

Roache is another of those 'stars' who before he was arrested was very vocal about there being an on-going 'witch hunt' against celebrities.

Helen Flanagan, AKA Rosie Webster in the soap, who was very vocal in support of LeVell after he was cleared, is allegedly appearing as a witness for Roache in his forthcoming trial.

That would be just about fucking right since she wasn't even born when the rape and assaults took place. Source

The third Corrie actor charged with noncing is ex Corrie cast member, Andrew Lancel, AKA Frank Foster.

Married Lancel – a father of one – went on trial in June of this year charged with 6 counts of sexually assaulting a 14 year old boy.

Predictably, Lancel, like Adamson and Le Vell was found not guilty. Source

Previous to last October but omitted from 'Celebrity Paedophiles' – my bad – was Christopher Quentin AKA the streets Brian Tilsley.

Quentin was also charged with rape in 2005... And cleared of rape in 2006.

As for the other two 'stars'... Well, I can't tell you who they are because I don't know their identities... Yet.

But it seems that the pair are currently under investigation for a four in a bed romp with two girls believed to be between the ages of 10 and 12.

No doubt they are not guilty too.

And then there is Corrie actor Chris fountain AKA Tommy Duckworth who is currently suspended.

The suspension came about after an online video surfaced showing him performing a rap song threatening rape and violence. Source

No doubt Helen Flanagan will have something to say on the matter.

For those of you who haven't read my article 'Celebrity Paedophiles' the following is what I had to say about Coronation Street. Or you can skip it and go straight to the article about the two stars currently under investigation:

Coronation Street for some strange reason seems to have had more than its fair share of Paedophiles and perverts. Amongst those are actor Michael La Vell (Kevin Webster) who was arrested in September 2011 on a charge of having sex with an underage girl.

The charge was dropped earlier this year due to 'insufficient evidence', but that in no way mean's that La Vell is not guilty, although he strenuously denied the charge.

Then again, so did the comedian Freddie Starr. He recently denied ever meeting the 14 yr old girl he was recently accused of molesting back in the 1970's. In fact, Starr was so incensed by the accusation that he tried to take out a court injunction banning the press from repeating the sex allegation.

Tellingly, the Injunction was denied leaving Starr forced to loudly protest his innocence in the press and repeat his claim that he had never ever met the girl let alone fondled her sexually... Only trouble was, a video of the TV show surfaced a few days later, showing Rock steady Freddie alongside the girl.

Never the less, if La Vell says he's innocent, then that's good enough for me... Unfortunately, for him, it's not good enough for his wife, Ex 'Corrie' actress Janette Beverley. She ended their 25 yr marriage following his arrest, although the official story has it that they had apparently become 'Estranged from each other'... Hmmm.

Another Corrie Paedophile, who wasn't... wink, wink... Was Peter Adamson who played builder Len Fairclough, the Husband to Rita (Actress Barbara Knox), who is still in the show. The following is from Wikipedia:

On 24 April 1983, a Sunday newspaper reported that Adamson had been arrested for indecently assaulting two eight-year old girls in a public swimming pool in Haslingden where he had assisted as a part-time instructor. One was allegedly assaulted the day before, the other on 16 April. The police complaint alleged that Adamson's hands had strayed while giving the girls swimming lessons.

He was represented by the barrister George Carman QC, who had a prominent career defending celebrities. On 26 July 1983, a Crown Court jury found Adamson not guilty. The following year, after his wife's death and still suffering financial woes and drinking problems, he was allegedly persuaded by freelance Sun reporter Dan Slater to change his story following several bottles of whisky. Adamson was alleged to have told Slater "I am totally guilty of everything the police said"..."But what I hope you will print – there was no sexual intent."

Another instance of British Justice favouring paedophiles? The man was caught red handed for crying out loud. The fact that a case is held before a jury who find the defendant not guilty, does not necessarily prove innocence. Judges are forever gently leading juries in such a way that they reach the verdict that the judges desire. And let's not forget how star struck the UK Zombies are. If you are a celebrity up in front of a jury, you have a 10 yard head start already.

Tellingly... There is always a 'tellingly', don't cha know, Adamson was sacked by Coronation Street producers after his arrest. They didn't bother to wait and see if he was found guilty or not guilty. Furthermore, once he had been found not guilty (Good barrister, that George Carman), the work didn't come pouring back in

And talking of the late George Carman QC, his son Dominic recently wrote in the Guardian newspaper the following:

In 1992, my father, George Carman QC, had been retained by Savile's lawyers over a different matter, which never reached court. By 1994, the name Carman, and what he could do in cross-examination, put such fear into the minds of litigants, lawyers and editors that libel cases were settled and, in some circumstances, perhaps stories were not published. Savile may have been one of those...

In 1983, Adamson was tried for indecently assaulting two eight-year-old girls in a public swimming pool, in Haslingden. Following complaints of previous incidents, the assaults had been witnessed by two police officers watching through a porthole, which gave an underwater view of the pool. In cross-examining the officers and the girls, my father destroyed the case. Adamson walked free. The following year, he told a Sun reporter: "I am totally guilty of everything the police said."

When the Sun reported the story, no further action was taken. Adamson died in 2002. Source – Anorak Website.

Adamson did in fact; die penniless in January 2002 from stomach cancer.

Another shamed, big name Corrie star to fall from grace was the actor Peter Dudley (Bert Tilsley in the show). Although he wasn't strictly a paedophile, he was a sexual deviant. Once again, I will leave it to Wikipedia to elaborate:

On 29 January 1979, he joined the cast as a regular playing family man Bert alongside Lynne Perrie and Christopher Quinten. He was openly homosexual, and in 1982, Dudley was observed exposing himself to another man in a public toilet in Didsbury, and was charged with importuning. With commendable courage, Coronation Street Producer Bill Podmore stood by him and he continued to appear in the series. He was found guilty and fined £200.

Dudley was charged with gross indecency some months later. Although he claimed he was not guilty and had been set up by the police, he realised he was in very serious trouble. He chose to go to Crown Court rather than a Magistrates Court, which prolonged the affair and made it very public. The first jury failed to agree and the judge ordered a retrial. The strain became too much and he suffered a stroke, losing much of the use of his left side, and briefly his speech. The retrial was postponed and the file kept open.

Craig Charles, recently suspended by Coronation Street producers because of his Crack addiction was once arrested and remanded in custody for rape. The following is once again from Wikipedia who have this to say about the actor who plays Lloyd Mullaney in the show:

In July 1994, Charles and a friend were arrested and remanded in custody for several months on a rape charge. While in prison, Charles was attacked by a man wielding a knife. In March 1995, both men were acquitted in their trial. After being cleared, Charles spoke of the need to restore anonymity for those accused of rape. He stated that "the fact that my name and address along with my picture can appear on the front of the papers before the so-called 'victim' has even signed a statement proves that anonymity for rape defendants is a must and that the law must be changed."

Rape is a serious charge, but never the less how many alleged rapists are remanded in custody before going to trial? Not many, I would wager, unless there is very good reason to warrant it.

There is a pattern opening up in these acquittals, not guilty's and insufficient evidence isn't there? My article, 'Why the justice system favours paedophiles' which was originally published by the Sovereign Independent Newspaper and was subsequently picked up by many other websites goes a long way- as the title suggests – to explain this low rate of convictions.

John Savident, who played Corrie butcher Fred Elliot... A say Fred Elliot... Never mind, you had to be there... was savagely knifed in the neck in December 2000 after picking up a maniac in a Manchester Gay bar. The attack happened after the pair went back to Savident's home. Such was the ferocity of the attack that the judge sentenced knife wielding, would be gay slayer, Michael Smith to 7 years in prison.

Even William Roach, Boring Ken Barlow in the long running Soap, doesn't escape scot free. He recently admitted to Piers Morgan that he had been a serial adulterer throughout his marriage and had bedded over a 1000 women...

Two Coronation Street stars investigated over four-in-a-bed incident with two underage girls

15 Sep 2013 00:00

The disturbing scenes are alleged to have taken place in an hotel in 2008

Two Coronation Street stars are being investigated by police over allegations of a four-in-a bed-romp with two underage girls.

Greater Manchester Police are probing claims that two girls aged between 10 and 12 shared a bed with two actors from the soap.

Detectives have apparently twice interviewed a witness to the disturbing scenes which are alleged to have taken place in an hotel in 2008.

The witness saw the two stars in bed with the girls at 7am and told police one of the men jumped out of bed in his boxer shorts and said, 'You have not seen anything, you have not seen anything' before slamming the door.

The witness did not contact police at the time but has since told them the information played on his mind and he felt he had a duty to report it.

Last night a Greater Manchester Police spokesman said: “We received a complaint relating to an alleged incident around five years ago. Enquiries are ongoing.”

The new allegations came to light in the week that fellow Corrie actor Michael Le Vell, who plays Kevin Webster, was cleared of child rape at Manchester Crown Court.
